Public Hearing: Proposed change in Tax Credit policies

The Chair opened a public hearing on the proposed change in Tax Credit policies regarding the transfer of tax credit investors in projects in Washington State at 9:32 a.m.

Val Pate, Director of Asset Management and Compliance (AMC) Division, stated that currently the Commission allows changes in property ownership during the regulatory period, if it reviews and approves the proposed change. The review process allows the staff to examine the structure of the proposed change, determine whether the new ownership entity will have capacity to continue compliance with the regulatory agreement, and the resulting transfer agreement (which is recorded) requires that the incoming ownership entity acknowledge and agree to follow the terms of the regulatory agreement. Until now, the Commission has not required approval for transfers that don’t directly impact the operations of a project, i.e. transfers that occur at the “upper tier” of a partnership. However, staff is proposing a change to this policy.

AMC is beginning to witness, both here in Washington State and across the country, certain investor entities who are stepping in to partnerships with the sole intent of disrupting the year-15 exit transaction. Several of these entities are aggregating properties in many states. The traditional intent of a partnership exit has always been to hand over the property to the general partner once the investor member has realized their tax benefits. However, in some strong, high-value markets, there has been an incentive for investors to extract additional value from the real estate before exiting. This has been done in multiple ways, including stalling approvals on needed documents, challenging terms of the original partnership agreement, and even attempting to remove the general partner for non-performance. There have been multiple similar cases throughout the country.

This practice is detrimental to general partners as organizations and to the operations of the projects. The ultimate impact is on the residents, because funds that would be used to keep the building in good repair, or to focus on strong operations, are deployed by general partners to litigate their partnership agreements. These types of disputes do not appear to serve any purpose to the project besides extracting maximum value during the exit period and ultimately re-marketing the project at a higher price. Ultimately, the original General Partner (often a non-profit) risks losing this project from their portfolio.

The Commission can impact this practice by adding an approval process for investor member transfers. This would deter investor members from entering a partnership for the sole purpose of extracting additional value from the year 15 exit and then flipping the project for additional profit. Therefore, staff is proposing a change to the transfer process that will add an approval mechanism for “upper tier” transfers. AMC is proposing to add a criteria that will not allow an entity that has demonstrated this practice on previous transactions to step into projects in Washington.

On August 1, AMC sent out an e-mail notifying stakeholders of the proposed change, and a link to the Asset Management and Compliance portion of the Commission website, with a redlined version of current transfer chapter. In the e-mail and on the website, staff asked for comments, with a deadline of Friday, August 9. In this time period, staff received one phone call from a syndicator, and one e-mail from a developer. In both cases, staff was able to explain the intent of the policy change, and ultimately received verbal support.
After further discussion and consideration, AMC is proposing to eliminate the originally proposed $1,500 fee for upper tier transfers, as the review process will consist of collecting a certification form.

There were no comments from members of the public and the hearing was closed at 9:48 a.m.

Ms. Pate has been working with Mr. Lieberman to update the MOU-related data with Seattle City Lights. This relationship provides aggregated data from WBARS to automatically enroll many of building residents, who are already income-qualified for their units, in a low-cost utility program. Mr. Lieberman has been cultivating similar relationships with other statewide utility providers.

All inspections have been either completed or are scheduled in Asset Management and Compliance. AMC will be conducting a search for a new provider to perform the work in 2020.
