Blue Mountain Action Council CEO to join the Washington State Housing Finance Commission (WSHFC) as the representative of low-income persons.

SEATTLE – Washington State Housing Finance Commission (WSHFC) Commission Chair Karen Miller announced today that Chief Executive Officer, Blue Mountain Action Council, Steve Moss, will join the Washington State Housing Finance Commission an eleven member commission as the representative of low-income persons, a position appointed by State of Washington Governor Christine Gregoire.

Moss, former Board President of Washington State Community Action Partnership; former Board President and current Board member, Washington State Coalition for the Homeless; [former] Board member, Washington State Rural Development Council; former Board Treasurer, Washington Low-Income Housing Network; current Board member, Eastern Washington Partnership Workforce Development Council. “Steve, with his vast experience, will provide a great deal of understanding to the Commission’s efforts in financing moderate to low income housing,” said Commission Chair Karen Miller.

The Washington State Housing Finance Commission is a self-supporting agency that provides below-market financing to buy, build or preserve affordable housing and nonprofit capital facilities. The Commission builds partnerships with the private sector to raise capital needed to further these social and economic objectives at no cost to the taxpayers of Washington State.
